

The WI "No-Call List" law should be left alone. There is nothing wrong it-if anything it should be more strict. Companies still manage to call at the inappropriate times and some of those telemarketers can be down right nasty. My husband, who respectfully told a telemarketer that he was not interested (several times) was then verbally abused. This happened twice in the last 6 months! We don't need or want someone calling our home to try and sell us on something. We are responsible adults and know where to find goods and services as we need them.
